

Mulvane Centenarian enjoys Centennial State Fair

This year, at the centennial edition of the Kansas State Fair, George Heersche may just hold the record for attending the most times; and it just so happens George is also 100 years old.

George estimates the first time he attended the fair was in 1932 and has attended almost every year since. He comes to see the cows and visit old friends.

George was born in Holland in 1912, just before World War I. To escape the war, George's father took the family to Nova Scotia by rowboat. The family eventually ended up near Mulvane where they took up Dairy Farming.

George has been retired since the 1970's, but he continues to go to the fair, this year assisted by his son, to see the Holsteins at the Kansas State Fair.
